

Susanita, a T-shirt with a heart.

Once upon a time there was a beautiful T-shirt named Susanita who was born in an old textile factory in a far town in Cordoba. From the very beginning, she became the queen of the place because its little pink heart and her soft texture made her stand out over the rest of her mates: trousers, shirts, blouses and hoodies.

A few weeks after her birth, she set off on a long trip to a huge department store in the city. There, she made a lot of good friends: trousers, jackets, jumpers, dresses and coats, but despite the welcoming company she felt quite lonely and yearned to belong to a family.

One day, a beautiful girl with dark curly hair and a wonderful smile popped into the shop in search of a gorgeous outfit to wear on special occasions. The very moment she set her eyes on Susanita she fell in love with her and convinced her mum to buy her the lovely t-shirt. Since then, Susanita and Lucía became inseparable at every special event: birthday parties, school trips, etc.

Unfortunately, as time went by Lucía grew out of her lovely t-shirt and Susanita started feeling useless because she was always kept away in an old wooden drawer in Lucia's room. On top of that she had grown a horrible mole in the middle of her little heart that no detergent in the world could wash off and her brightness had vanished off since she had lost several of her sparkling sequins.

One morning when Lucía was going to enter her classroom she noticed a colourful poster on the opposite classroom door. A group of students from FPB were collecting and repairing old worn out clothes to bring them to the Solidarity Wardrobe in the Esperanza brotherhood in Arahal.

Immediately Lucia took Susanita to school, had her horrible mole wiped off and her sequins restored onto her heart. Susanita was delighted again, especially because she knew she would be taken to this special wardrobe where she could meet another lovely girl with a wonderful smile that would become her closest friend again .
